Fabricut x Christiane Lemieux
Multi-hyphenate creative Christiane Lemieux — a designer, entrepreneur, investor, author, and founder of DwellStudio and European luxury lifestyle brand, Lemieux Et Cie — can now add fabric visionary and curator to her list of talents, as she begins her partnership with Fabricut. "Textile design was an art-based endeavor hundreds of years ago, and I want to put that creative energy into our process," she says, of their collection, Material Archive, featuring fabrics developed from hand-drawn sketches, illustrations, and inventive colorways. "For this archive, I pulled inspiration from my personal collection of textile fragments, a library I have been building over a lifetime," she says. "But this archive isn't just a celebration of print, it is a celebration of process."

Hartmann & Forbes x Amy Meier

Hartmann & Forbes, an award-winning maker of sustainable natural luxury textiles including window and wall coverings, has launched its first collection with Rancho Santa Fe-based designer, Amy Meier. Featuring seven woven-to-size grass weave window coverings, plus one natural wallcovering, Meier found inspiration for the textiles from Japanese design, the Bauhaus School and traditional Korean cloth. She integrated qualities and nuances from all three distinct and wildly different styles into one new collection filled with soft hues, translucent weaves, geometric patterns and most of all, an organic sensibility.
